Beware the refund scam

By RYAN LAROCHE
News Correspondent

WILMINGTON — A Wilmington resident was nearly the victim of a scam, but some quick thinking saved him (and his bank account).

For the past six months, the resident had been receiving phone calls from a California number, 213-784-2839, telling him that a company was offering him a $299 refund. However, the caller, who spoke with a heavy accent, couldn't identify the company; he could only say it went out of business.

The resident said it sounded plausible enough, so he ended up downloading a program called TeamViewer Automatic, which, unbeknownst to him, gave the caller access to his computer. Once he realized his mistake, he unplugged his computer.

(TeamViewer is proprietary software for remote control, desktop sharing, online meetings, web conferencing, and file transfer between computers.)

The caller tried to get the resident's bank account information, but was unsuccessful. Eventually, the resident was able to turn his computer back on and delete the program he had downloaded.

This is just one of many scams perpetrated by trolls looking to steal your bank account or credit card information.

The number one scam, according to Wilmington Police Chief Joseph Desmond, involves someone pretending to be from the IRS and telling callers he or she owes money and to pay by gift card (e.g. a Visa Gift Card where the caller would read off the card number, expiration date and the three-digit security code). For the record, the IRS would never call someone or demand anyone pay over the phone. Any interaction with them would be via written letter.

Chief Desmond also said another popular scam involves telling someone their loved one has been locked up and money is needed to free them.

Although the chief noted how difficult it is for the police to stop scammers, since most are calling from outside the United States, he advised residents to call the department regardless if anyone feels they have been the victim of a scam. "A legitimate company won't ask you to download a program or send them money," the chief said as a reminder to anyone who receives such a call.

He was an Army helicopter pilot and saw a red car parked among the corn stalks. Curious about the vehicle, he found the farmer who owned the field. The farmer had forgotten the car was there. A friend had abandoned it many years ago. He gave the MGA to the Army pilot who then restored it.

Wilmington Police Dept. National Night Out 2019

By LIZZY HILL
News Correspondent

WILMINGTON — This Tuesday night, the Wilmington Police Department is excited to welcome Wilmington and surrounding town residents of all ages to meet the people serving them as police and federal law enforcement officers. WPD is hosting National Night Out at Rotary Park on Aug. 6 from 5 - 8 p.m. so that residents can learn more about how their public service officers work in their community and get to know them on a personal level.

Wilmington Traffic Officer Matt Stavro has been coordinating National Night Out this year as part of WPD's commitment to community programs. National Night

Out is an individual event that any city or town police department can host as a way to promote police-community relations.

"This was one of the things we wanted to institute when we got the Cummings Grant back in 2014," Stavro shared.

This year makes the sixth year of Wilmington's participation. The group coordinating this event alongside Stavro are Brian Moon, Paul Chalifour, Dan Murray, and Butch Alpers.

As they take advantage of the freedom to run the event however works best for Wilmington, they look forward to bringing in extra federal law enforcement officers.

"People don't realize a lot of the federal agencies that we work with," Stavro continued.

Agencies that are joining WPD on Tuesday night include the FBI, the ATF, U.S. Postal Inspectors, Federal Reserve Police, U.S. Customs, the Massachusetts State Police, Massachusetts Environmental Police, Lowell EMS, Veterans Affairs Police, and k-9 units from the Middlesex Sheriff Department and Chelmsford Police Department.

There, these officers will get the chance to teach the people of Wilmington and the surrounding community about how they work for them. While Stavro does a fair amount of inviting them, he mentioned that over the years these officers check in with him early to make sure that National Night Out is happening again.

"They really enjoy the opportunities to interact with people; a lot of them don't get the chance to sit down with the public on the community level."

Wilmington police also will be supported by the Reading and Woburn police departments.

At the same time as they're outside chatting with residents or being available for everything from tours to vehicle displays to CPR simulations, police officers will be maintaining safety throughout the night on Tuesday.

"It's similar to working the Fun on the Fourth festival. We'll have close to 20 officers working in a law enforcement role at the same time as they're working the event," Stavro said.

They expect between six and eight hundred people to stop by throughout the evening on Tuesday for the chance to meet and learn from their police officers while having fun as a family in the community.

The team of Wilmington and surrounding law enforcement officers encourage residents to bring their questions and concerns as they enjoy special parts of the night like the National Guard helicopter landing, the dunk tank, bouncy houses, ice cream, and dinner from the Red Heat Tavern.

For updates, residents can look to the WPD Facebook page at www.facebook.com/wilmingtonmapd and National Night Out event page <https://www.facebook.com/events/96392613732300/>.

DEDUCTING FOREIGN TRAVEL COSTS

When traveling outside the United States primarily for business reasons, the travel expenses, as a general rule, including transportation, must be allocated between business and personal expenses. However, transportation expenses as well as other out-of-pocket business expenses can be deducted in full if the trip is primarily for business and either of the following exceptions is satisfied:

The one-week rule. The business trip is one week or less, excluding the departure day, but including the day of return. One week means seven consecutive days.

For example, a businessperson leaves the United States for a business trip on a Thursday, returning the following Thursday. As the taxpayer was not away from home for more than seven consecutive days, the taxpayer's transportation expenses, as well as other out-of-pocket business expenses, are deductible in full.

The 25 percent rule. Transportation and other out-of-pocket business expenses can also be deducted in full for trips lasting more than a week, as long as less than 25 percent of the trip is attributable to personal activities. For this purpose, include the day of departure and day of return as business days, as long as the travel is to or from the business destination. Generally, the allocation between business and personal time must be made on a day-by-day basis. Expenses allocable to personal days are not deductible.

Finally, in a catchall provision, 100 percent of transportation costs to and from foreign destinations are deductible if it can be proven that a personal vacation was not a major consideration in choosing to make the trip.

Runaway from Wilmington sentenced for 1938 Nebraska murder

By LARZ F. NEILSON

The 1930s were particularly tough years in the United States. The era known as the Depression left many families hard-pressed to put food on the table. One young man in Wilmington felt that he could be of better service to his family if he left. So in September 1938 he hit the rails, the most common way for poor folk to travel.

Mrs. Hannah Ryder, twice a widow and the mother of five children, was heartbroken when she found a note from her son. Officer Paul Chalifour recently found it in an entry in the police log book. It had been copied into the book by Chief Harry Ainsworth.

"Mother: Don't worry about me. I'm not worth it. Tell Mrs. Norman I am sorry to leave so abruptly. No one has any use for me. I am going to wipe the slate clean and start all over again some place where no one knows me.

Yours lovingly, Lester."

Gary Lester Ames had just completed the eighth grade at the Buzzell School in Wilmington. His teacher, Margaret Delaney, described him as a kind and sympathetic boy who had been helpful in bringing up his younger sister and brother. She said he was just like a father to his two-year old sister.

A few weeks later, he was in prison. Not just in jail, he was in prison for second degree murder. At age 14, he was given a life sentence.

He and a companion had jumped a freight train in Nebraska on Oct. 14, 1938. Entering a box car, they came face to face with a middle-aged transient, Edward Billings. They beat him with a large sugar beet and then Ames' companion, Dan Galloway, shot him. After going through Billings' pockets, and only finding $1.25, they allegedly stabbed him in a rage, then threw him from the train.

Galloway and Ames were arrested the next day by railroad police in Kearney, Nebraska. Lester Ames was 1,600 miles from home with no money and no lawyer, facing a charge of second degree murder.

Galloway and Ames both told the same story, that they were afraid Billings would attack them. After questioning, though, they admitted that robbery was the motive. Ames admitted stabbing Billings in a rage after finding such a small sum. In an Associated Press story, Sheriff George Sears quoted him saying, "I guess I was so mad I didn't know what I was doing."

His teacher wrote that he was a good student. He also had a letter of support from the Wilmington Chief of Police Harry Ainsworth. None of that helped, though. Sears described him as a shrewd youth with a good education who thought he was tough.

The pair both pled guilty to second degree murder and were sentenced to life in prison. Three weeks later, the Boston Globe said that Fr. Edward Flanagan would try to get Ames paroled and into Boys' Town in Lincoln, Nebraska. That evidently did not come to pass, as the 1940 census listed him as an inmate at Nebraska State Prison.

The 1930 census had listed him as six-years old, living with his mother, Hannah Ryder, and stepfather, Raymond Ryder. Lester was born in Virginia in 1924. His father was Oliver E. Ames. The name Oliver is common in some Ames families but is not found among those living in Wilmington.

He eventually returned to Wilmington and was living with his mother and half-brother in 1955 and 1956. There is no record of him after that. She was later listed on Clifton Street, off Forest Street. She died in 1977.

You try and tell another story, if you can

The August Book Stew episode, hosted by Eileen MacDougall, features the show's first children's book author/illustrator, Bucharest, Romania native Ioana Hobai, who grew up in under a very repressive regime.

Ioana's childhood interests pulled her in many directions, but she always doodled and drew — her grandfather noted that at a very young age, she could draw a perfect circle.

She worked as an architect until coming to the US and pursuing her heart's desire — writing and drawing children's books. By taking an invaluable class at Mass Art, and with a few felicitous breaks, Ioana has had two books published — Before You Sleep, a poem which she illustrated, and the new Lena's Slippers, a tale based on her own childhood, where she was responsible for both words and drawings.

You'll enjoy meeting Ioana and hearing her describe her journey and her suggestions for those who'd like to follow a similar path.

Please check out the 71th Book Stew episode on WCTV on Tuesdays at 1 p.m., Wednesdays at 8 p.m., Friday at 7 p.m., and Saturdays at noon. To watch online, use this link to watch the latest episode:

Served by Lazarus House, Representative Nguyen sheds a light on needs

LAWRENCE — Spend five minutes with State Rep. Tram Nguyen (D-18th Essex) and you'll experience the heartfelt energy she carries and reflects. Her immigrant journey not only radiates a classic American success story, but also the obligation one immigrant feels to those who have followed.

Nguyen was five-years old when her family "had no choice" but to leave Vietnam and then settle in Lawrence with less than $100. 25 years later, she became the first Vietnamese-American woman elected to the Massachusetts legislature.

Talking to her now, it's not a surprising achievement, but when they arrived in 1992 that might have been harder to predict.

"After the war ended my father (who fought on the losing South Vietnamese side) was in a reeducation (prison) camp for eight years. Even after his release, he was completely blacklisted," said Nguyen. "He then struggled for nine years in Vietnam to make a living, but could not."

Arriving as a five-year old, her first memories of life here are admittedly vague. But she does remember struggling to learn English and "being bullied" because she could not pronounce words.

While her English at the Wetherbee School in Lawrence came quickly, her parents' struggle to earn a living lasted a few years longer.

"My parents worked odd jobs. I am not ashamed to say we were on welfare at first," she said. "That is why I believe having a safety net is still so important to move people out of poverty."

Nguyen lived in public housing just a 10 minute walk from Lazarus House, which works to break the cycle of poverty providing a variety of services to struggling individuals and families.

Lazarus House was among the places Nguyen's family turned for help at the holidays from Project Bethlehem, which enables families to have gifts for Christmas. "We had no money, but we would get presents from Lazarus House," she said.

Not only did it allow them to share the experience of children around them, "we believe it's a season for families to celebrate blessings in their households."

She and her sister now "pay it forward," by helping with gifts so that families today can have Christmas.

"We remember what a difference it made for us," she said.

While Nguyen is the first in her family to finish college, not going was never an option.

"My parents had sacrificed everything so we could have those opportunities," she said. "We were going to make something of ourselves."

Nguyen graduated from Tufts and then Northeastern University Law School.

Working as an attorney with Greater Boston Legal Services was her first exposure to advocacy, seeing the impact of their work on the lives of current immigrants and low income families. It also shaped her decision to run for public office.

"As an attorney with GBLS, I did policy work. I had to meet with representatives and senators to explain why these things are important," she said.

Rep. James Lyons, who she defeated, "seemed to oppose every single bill I ever worked on without giving me a chance to explain to him why they were important."

Knocking on doors again and again throughout a district which goes from Tewksbury to Boxford, she defeated him easily.

In office she now prioritizes labor rights, domestic violence and climate change, along with reproductive rights and the opioid crisis. But her immigrant roots are never far from her thoughts.

"I am setting an example. There has never been another voice like mine, because of my background. I hope I can inspire others like me to see themselves as perhaps running for office someday."

Sen. Tarr, Reps. Robertson, Gordon secure support for Buzzell Senior Center

BOSTON — Wilmington's legislative delegation, Senate Minority Leader Bruce Tarr, Representative David Robertson, and Representative Ken Gordon, succeeded in securing $30,000 in the new state Fiscal Year 2020 budget for necessary repairs and renovations at Wilmington's Buzzell Senior Center.

"Every time I have come through the doors of the Buzzell Center I've found it to be a welcoming and vital place full of active and engaged citizens, volunteers and supportive staff — what they do here makes this place worth fighting for," said Sen. Tarr. "Terri Marcicello and her team do a wonderful job and I want to help them continue doing what they do best."

"It was a pleasure working with Sen. Tarr on behalf of Wilmington. The Senate and the House have shown an investment in public education by increasing state aide to our schools, which also helps slow the rate of growth of our property taxes, as well as increased the funding for roads and bridges. I especially enjoyed working to help secure funding for improvements to the Buzzell Senior Center kitchen and other facilities, which is not just a special place for our seniors but the entire town," said Rep. Robertson (D - Tewksbury). "It's always been a well-used facility and these improvements will go a long way."

The center, located across from the Wilmington High School at 15 School St., was the subject of two state budget amendments.

"Senior centers are critical to communities and to be able to help a facility like the one in Wilmington receive funding is something I am proud of," said Rep. Gordon (D-Bedford). "I am delighted the Commonwealth has chosen to support the Wilmington Senior Citizens Center."

"How extremely fortunate that we have the support of Sen. Bruce Tarr and Rep. Robertson to offer these amendments to help us with our work," said Terri Marcicello, Director of Elderly Services. "They know how important our senior center is to the community and they have supported Wilmington's seniors in many forms."

Rep. Robertson filed, with the support of Rep. Gordon, budget language that would provide $20,000 for the center. The appropriation request was adopted by the House in May.

Sen. Tarr authored an amendment, which gained popular support in the Senate, to raise the funding level for the Wilmington center to $30,000. The Tarr amendment was adopted.

Tarr, as Senate Minority Leader, selected one of the six committee members who worked to reconcile the differences between the House and Senate versions of the $43.1 billion budget. They reached consensus recently on a compromise spending plan for the new fiscal year that began on July 1.

Tarr, Robertson and Gordon wrote to the conferees in June urging the panel to include in the final Conference Committee report the Senate's higher amount.

Governor Baker has until Aug. 2 to approve or disapprove of the contents of the $43.1 billion budget proposal which was approved by both legislative branches by a near unanimous vote on July 22.

Napa Valley more than wine (but it's also wine)

By PAIGE IMPINK
News Correspondent
paige@yourtowncrier.com

A visit to wine country near San Francisco is a wonderful add on to any northern California adventure. Situated alongside its sister valley and marketing rival Sonoma County, Napa Valley is home to over 400 wineries, though the number is hard to nail down because of the variety of tasting rooms, vineyards, and crushing facilities that abound. The valley is 35 miles long and five miles wide and has a world-renowned climate and growing location which arguably rivals those with far more ancient lineage in Europe. The area was discovered and promoted in 1836 by George Yount, a European settler who planted wine grapes and quickly found the soil was favorable for the vines. Word spread rapidly and names which still endure today put down their own roots — Inglenook, Beringer, Krug, and later Mondavi, as examples.

While visiting wineries is often about tasting multiple varieties of wine, there is a strong art and food culture that is integral to the area. World class chefs and iconic eateries such as The French Laundry draw tourists from all over the world.

We visited the Hess Collection and toured three floors of galleries. Not only did the art enhance the experience, it made for a wine-free option for our family and a no-cost way to visit some of the most beautiful vineyards. By California law, wineries must have a retail component to their business and as such, welcome any and all visitors, even if they are not participating in a tasting. We were able to see the grounds and vineyards of Hess, and enjoyed sweeping views of the valley at Silverado, an estate owned by members of the Disney family.

The valley has undergone a transition, with a visitor center and downtown designed around the architecture of late 1800s California and some landscaping created to protect the city center from flooding. Friendly volunteers help tourists map out their tasting adventures and gauge the type of experiences they are seeking.

In an effort to cut down on drinking and driving, wineries have instituted a tasting fee and reservation system. Tastings must be scheduled and deliberate. There are a very few wineries offering drop-in tastings any longer. There are numerous services that will drive visitors around, and there are pairings promoted such as gourmet lunches and dinner events to go with the wine.

Estates are looking to keep visitors on site for longer periods of time, sampling and spending. However, one may still enjoy the area just by driving and grabbing a picnic at the Oxbow Public Market, an upscale farmer's market and artisanal food destination not unlike the Boston Public Market.

There are small groceries and eateries sprinkled about, and regular grocery chains such as Safeway. The Napa Valley Vine Trail is a wide and paved multiuse path which winds through the valley and when it is fully built out, will run 47 miles. It's great for biking or walking. Valley towns such as Calistoga, Yountville and St. Helena run along California 29 and provide bakeries, olive oil shops, and satellite tasting rooms for larger vineyards perched in the mountains.

Changes in the climate are affecting wine production, as are events such as wildfires. In 2017, the area was devastated by the Napa Valley fires, destroying 24 wineries and damaging countless others. A documentary about this event was produced by chef Tyler Florence, touching on the heartache and resilience of the wine growers.

The weather is also changing, and visitors will note giant pro-cellers and lollipop-shaped machines designed to blow cold night air out of the valley floor so that grapes don't freeze. Years of drought have also stressed vines and put pressure on irrigation systems. Water is necessary to produce and bottle wine. Vintners are digging wells, but low levels of groundwater make many unusable.

As with so much of the California agricultural economy, water is the lifeblood, and its availability will impact product costs for the rest of the country. The Napa Valley is a fascinating and beautiful place to visit as a day trip or weekend destination while in California. Add it to your list.

Sunflower, the unofficial symbol of summer

By HEATHER BURNS
News Correspondent

If there was an unofficial symbol of summer, I would have to nominate the sunflower.

This eternally happy, summer annual is remarkably tough and easy to grow. They are heat and drought tolerant, and attract the much needed bee, which is essential for cross pollination in any garden.

Sunflowers come in several size varieties, from small patio pot size to giant 16-foot tall varieties with large daisy-like flower faces that are bright yellow like the summer sun. The flower heads become heavy when the brown center of the flower ripens, and is filled with sunflower seeds.

Sunflower seeds are technically the fruit of the sunflower plant. Some sunflower heads can measure up to 12 inches in diameter, and a single flower head can contain up to 2,000 seeds.

Sunflower seeds are enjoyed by many as a favorite snack food. They are encased in a black and white striped shell, and have a mild, nutty flavor. Sunflower seeds are not only a tasty treat, but they are also packed with nutrients.

Sunflower seeds are loaded with protein, fiber, niacin, iron, zinc and vitamin B6. They are especially high in vitamin E, folate, copper, manganese and selenium.

Many of these nutrients function as antioxidants, which protect the body cells from radical damage that plays a role in many chronic diseases.

According to Healthline.com, studies show that adding sunflower seeds to your diet can help lower blood pressure, cholesterol, and blood sugar levels.

Although sunflower seeds are rich in nutrients, they are relatively high in calories. One ounce serving of shelled, dry roasted, sunflower seeds has 163 calories. Normally, snack foods high in calories are not a recommended snack choice. However, because it takes time to crack open and split each shell before you can eat the seed, most people eat sunflower seeds at a slower pace, thus not consuming as many as other snack foods.

Overall, the nutritional value of these seeds outweighs the higher calorie count.

Some people enjoy sucking on the salty taste of the shell before cracking them open to eat the seed inside. Keep in mind that commercially packed sunflower seeds may be coated with up to 2,500 mg of sodium. If you are on a low sodium diet, it is best to skip this ritual before you consume the seed.

Besides eating as a snack food, sunflower seeds are easy to incorporate into many of your favorite recipes.

Sunflower seeds can add a nutty, toasted flavor to soda bread recipes. This also goes for sweet bread recipes like banana, zucchini or pumpkin bread.

Sprinkle (shelled) sunflower seeds on top of muffins or scones before baking to add a nice crunch to every bite.

Sunflower seeds also add a nice crunch to leafy green vegetables. Toss sunflowers in olive oil, salt, red pepper flakes or ground ginger. Lightly toast before adding to your favorite vegetables like spinach, kale or green beans.

Ground sunflower seed can be used as a breading for chicken and fish, or mix with tofu and seasonings to make delicious vegetarian burgers.

The votes are in for the unofficial symbol of summer. Sunflowers are a bright and happy asset to any patio or garden, and the seed of the sunflower is an asset to a healthy diet. Whether you enjoy shelling and snacking on sunflower seeds while watching a ball game, or try incorporating sunflower seeds into your favorite recipes, enjoy the "fruits" of the sunflower all summer long.

News and notes from WCTV

By SHAUN NEVILLE
WCTV Executive Director

WCTV has seen a Podcast explosion in 2019. Have you noticed?

Let me start with the quick explanation on podcasting. Podcasts are like radio, but you listen to it on-demand. They are typically a series with a common theme. You can listen to WCTV podcasts through the WCTV App, Soundcloud and through the Apple Podcast App. Just search for WCTV. We also list them on our website at wctv.org/programs.

WCTV currently has nine podcast series being produced inside our podcast studio. Two of those are driven by WCTV staff. But the other seven, come from residents who are interested in sharing their stories, their insights and their interests. If you're new to podcasting, or very familiar with the platform, I invite you to check out these series from Wilmington producers. It's been a long time since we've seen this sort of widespread creativity in our studio.

"Namaste with Renee" is the newest series. Renee Marcou has been spending hours in the studio over the past month putting together her program, which talks a lot about finding your inner peace.

"Quick Health Concepts" with Dr. Leslee Quick is all about healthy living. Her first two podcasts talked about cannabis and its applications in health, with specific mentions of CBD and how it's different than marijuana.

"Fresh Perspectives" from Caroline Buckley is produced in partnership with the Substance Abuse Coalition and deals specifically with substance use and recovery.

"Minding Your Business" with Amy LaMarche invites local business owners to come in and talk about their industry and offer tips for potential customers. It's not a sales pitch. It's all about educating the consumer.

"TaP: Teens and Parents" features the mother-son combo of Erica and Connor Marchant. This series delves into issues that families face. The most recent episode was all about social media use and the internet in general.

"Mark's Musings" is one of our longest-running podcasts from producer Mark Ryan. Mark interviews authors in a very conversational setting.

"Now This With the North Nurse" is on summer break. But these short clips from Jane Ferrara and Heather Peachey deal with healthy concepts at school. Usually complete with sound effects! "How To Make a Memory" isn't produced in our studio. But we wouldn't feel right leaving Jen Tierney's podcast off this list. Her Wilmington-based series is all about making memories with the ones you love.

I mentioned at the beginning that we also have a pair of staff-produced podcasts. At the top of the list is Bridging the Digital Divide, WCTV's award-winning podcast produced by staff member Lisa Kapala and Brad McKenna from the Wilmington Memorial Library. If you often feel like technology is leaving you behind, this series will get you caught up. We also do a monthly "Member Spotlight" featuring one of our WCTV members.

Do you want to join the list of Wilmington podcasters? WCTV will train you on the equipment and host your series on our account. Contact Lisa Kapala at lisa@wctv.org to learn more. If nothing else, please check out an episode. You might be surprised at what you hear.

Harrison returns -- named interim Athletic Director at WHS

By JAMIE POTE

WILMINGTON - He's Baaaack!

On Tuesday afternoon, Wilmington Superintendent of Schools Dr. Glenn Brand announced that Ed Harrison has been named the interim Athletic Director at WHS. He is expected to serve for one year with the intention of a replacement coming in for July 1st, 2020.

Harrison served as the WHS AD for 13 years before retiring at the end of the school year in 2016. He was replaced by Tim Alberts, who officially ended his three-year tenure on Tuesday to take the same position at Triton Regional High School.

In a letter sent to parents, Dr. Brand expressed his thoughts on Alberts leaving and Harrison coming back.

Dear Members of the Wilmington Community,
As you may already be aware, Mr. Tim Alberts,

Director of Athletics, recently resigned from his position after securing a similar position in another district. I would like to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Alberts for his service to the Wilmington community during these past three years of his tenure.

After careful consideration, in terms of where Mr. Albert's departure leaves the district just prior to the opening of school and being outside the optimal 'window' of time in which to conduct a full search for his replacement, I have decided to pursue an interim Director of Athletics to serve in the role for the 2019-20 school year. It is my pleasure to share with you that Mr. Ed Harrison has agreed to serve in this capacity, effective immediately.

Mr. Harrison retired from the district in July 2016, after serving for 13 years in the role of Director in Wilmington. In addition to

Tewksbury's Russell to ride in PMC From a volunteer to a participant TEWKSBURY - Joe Russell is no stranger to the Pan Mass Challenge. In fact, the event has been a big part of his and his family's life for the last dozen years, but this Saturday he will be involved in a much different way than ever before.

Normally, Russell and his wife Suzanne find themselves as two of the leading fundraisers and volunteers for the event, supporting friends and family that are riding. But this year, Russell will find himself on the opposite end of spectrum, as for the first time he will be the one getting on the bike, making the 85-mile trek from Wellesley to Bourne on Saturday.

He will be riding along with his friend Deb Sughrue, who along with Joe's sister in law Carol White, have been riding for the past dozen years. This year, Carol has decided to put her bike away and Joe is eagerly taking her spot on the ride.

"As soon as Carol said she was not going to ride, I got right on it," Russell said. "I wanted to do it twelve years ago. It is a great cause and the more money we raise the better it is. It is difficult with so many people close to us riding to be able to raise enough money for everybody, so my wife and I decided to help raise money instead, but once a spot opened up I was glad to ride."

Russell and his family first became involved in the PMC 12 years ago when family friend Meghan McCarthy, then 15 years old, was diagnosed with cancer. McCarthy, who was good friends with Russell's daughters Jordan, Alli and Cassidy, was in fact on vacation in Disney World with the Russell family when they noticed that Meghan wasn't feeling well and was a little sluggish. Upon returning home, they let Meghan's family know of her symptoms, and not long after Meghan's family brought her to the doctor where she was diagnosed with glioblastoma multiforme.

"When we found out she had been diagnosed, it was extremely difficult," Russell said. "I still remember the day clearly. We had been friends with the McCarthy's for years. Meghan was like a part of our family. We thought of her like another daughter and our kids thought of her like a sister. It was just devastating news. We wanted to do something and that was when the fund

Wilmington resident to participate in PMC on behalf of close friend

Fifty years of friendship has been a ride to remember

By MIKE IPPOLITO

sports@yourtowncrier.com
WILMINGTON - It has been exactly two years since Chad Stalker got what was probably the worst phone call of his life. The date was August 2, 2017, and the call came from his best friend Ken Packard, a man he had known since childhood, growing up in the western Mass. Suburb of Belchertown.

The friends had been through everything imaginable together, remaining close through both ups and downs in both of their lives. But this call was unimaginable. Nobody could have prepared Chad for the words Ken had in store for him when he told him that he had been diagnosed with pancreatic cancer.

The 55-year old Stalker, now of Wilmington, knew his friend hadn't been feeling well. The two of them, both athletes and competitive swimmers in their younger days, had recently taken up bike riding as a way to get back in shape, and also as a way to spend time together. But a few weeks earlier Packard had started to complain about having some pain. He did what he had always done and worked through the pain.

Until that is, Ken's family, along with Chad, encouraged Ken to see a doctor after learning that he had a swollen lymph node near his hip. Not long afterwards Packard received the diagnosis. Stage IV pancreatic cancer. And not long after that, Stalker received the devastating news from his best friend.

"It was the worst couple of days of my life," Stalker recalled, his voice cracking with emotion. "This is a guy I had known for years, so to hear this news just awful. It made me think about the time I had been diagnosed with pancreatitis about ten years ago, and when I woke up, he was the first person I saw. He had always been there for me, and I wanted make sure I would be there for him."

This weekend Chad will indeed be there for his friend, as he will participate in the 40th Annual Pan Mass Challenge, which raises money for life saving cancer research at the Dana Farber Cancer Institute.

Stalker will be riding in the two-day challenge, along with Ken's sister and daughter, as part of Team Yesterday's Incredibles. On Saturday, he will bike the 110 miles from Sturbridge to Bourne alongside Ken's sister Jennifer and on Sunday he will get back on his bike and ride the 25 miles from Wellesley to Gillette Stadium with Ken's 13-year old daughter Sophie.

It is quite a commitment and quite the challenge indeed, but for Stalker it is a challenge he is more than willing to take on for his lifelong friend. And when you hear Chad tell the story of he and Ken's friendship, it is easy to understand why he is so willing to help his friend.

"My story with Ken starts over fifty years ago on a town beach in western Mass.," Stalker says. "We became friends and as we got older we joined the swim team and we stayed close all through high school and college. When we were growing up, during the summer we would spend one week at his house and one week at my house. Even as we got older we always stayed very close. We were always doing things together, either mountain climbing or biking or doing something active."

Stalker is not without health challenges of his own, as he is a diabetic, making his preparation for Saturday's Pan Mass Challenge all the more difficult. Not only must he get in the miles required for training, but he also needs to make sure he keeps his blood sugar up for what can be a five or six hour ride.

But Stalker has been able

Knocked out by North Reading

Wilmington Northeast Baseball team eliminated from the playoffs

By DAN ZIMMERMAN
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
WILMINGTON — At the outset of this summer's baseball season, the Northeast Wilmington club was out of the starting gate with blazing bats, winning three straight, and scoring an impressive thirty-two runs in the process. An ambitious start, indeed. Reality struck, however, when North Reading dealt Wilmington its first defeat, 7-2, in game four of the campaign and then another, 2-1, in the rematch.

A month later, it was nemesis North Reading rendering more heartache, eliminating Wilmington in a best two-of-three playoffs series.

Wilmington dropped the tournament opener last Tuesday evening at North Reading, 3-2, in a controversial game marred by poor officiating and the next night, at Scanlon Field, saw their season come to an abrupt conclusion in a rout, 9-0.

Wilmington wrapped up the summer campaign with a respectable 8-6-1 record, although it must be noted that three of the team's wins were via opposition forfeit.

"I really had a blast coaching these guys," said Wilmington coach Mark Dynan. "They like to have fun. I think the tricky part at the end of the year is the bats went silent. At the start, we were scoring a lot of runs but in this playoff, we couldn't string together enough hits."

Down the stretch, Wilmington didn't spend a lot of time actually playing baseball. Over the final six games, there were three forfeits by opponents due to lack of players and one weather-postponement that was not rescheduled. Their opening round playoff foe North Reading, meanwhile, was getting in plenty of games, although lost the final two.

Armed with optimism, the Wilmington players and coaching staff were determined to right the wrongs of the previous defeats when they arrived at North Reading High School last Tuesday evening. Despite playing with just the minimum nine, Dynan was brimming with confidence. And for the first four innings, a scoreless dogfight, he seemed to be on to something. Harry Serounian pitched the "game of his life," as it was later described.

"Harry pitched a solid game and we were making all the plays in the field behind him," said Dynan. "But a couple calls went against us. Honestly, they weren't close. And that took the wind out of our sails"

Dynan was referring to an abysmal fifth inning when the officials made not one, but two poor calls that altered the dynamic of the game and put North Reading in the driver's seat. Jared MacDonald led off with a basehit, only the third allowed by Serounian to that juncture. North Reading coach Marco Vittozzi exchanged MacDonald with pinch-runner Matt Ryan, who promptly bolted for second. Ryan was fast, but not fast enough to beat the throw from catcher Nico Piazza. The Wilmington bench was shocked and dismayed, however, when the official signaled the baserunner safe. A protest ensued but to no avail.

Frank Cassarino flared a double to left and suddenly, North Reading had a pair in scoring position with no outs. Serounian fanned Cam Randazzo to ease some of the pressure and then got his pitching counterpart, Demetri Boulis, to fly out. Wilmington outfielder Garrett Moreno got the ball in quickly, preventing Ryan from tagging and scoring the go-ahead run.

Serounian was soon ahead of the next batter, Joe Frammartino, with a two-out, two-strike count and followed with his best pitch of the evening, a pinpoint accurate fastball. Inexplicably, the umpire signaled a ball and immediately faced the wrath of the Wilmington faithful and coach Dynan. As if scripted, Frammartino lifted the next pitch to deep center for a triple, driving in a pair, and also reached on a throwing error.

Trailing 3-0, Wilmington put together a threat in the seventh. Tyler Fenton led off with a basehit, Moretto fanned, and then Tommy Boyajian worked Boulis for a walk. Brendon George scratched out the fourth Wilmington hit to load them. Joey Dynan popped but George was able to score on a North Reading fielding miscue. Unfortunately, Piazza popped up to end it, leaving the tying run in scoring position.

North Reading torched their host the next evening at Scanlon Field, scoring a pair of runs in the first inning and four in the fourth on the way to a 9-0 blanking to end Wilmington's season.

"If we could have gotten a call our way in that first game, maybe the mindset is a little different coming into the second game," said Dynan. "We weren't hitting the ball well and when we did, they were making the defensive plays to keep us off the basepads."

More specifically, a team of riders for the PMC the Flying Henry's asked Meghan to be their pedal partner. That was when White and Sughrue began to ride and the Russell family has never looked back. Meghan McCarthy lost her battle with cancer on January 19, 2010, but she has never been and will never be forgotten by the Russell family or anyone else who knew her, and her memory is still an inspiration to Joe as he prepares for his first PMC ride.

Unfortunately, McCarthy's tragic death was hardly the first time that Russell and his family had been touched by cancer, nor was it the last. Joe's grandfather, William H. Russell passed away from lung cancer when Joe was 15. About 15 years later, Joe's dad William J. Russell was diagnosed with metastatic cancer. While he survived for many years, he ultimately lost his battle to the disease as well.

A few years later the Russell family was introduced to the world of glioblastoma multiforme, when Joe's brother-in-law, John Iwaniki was diagnosed with the disease, followed shortly thereafter with Meghan's devastating diagnosis. Not long after losing Meghan, Joe's sister Sheila and another dear friend of the family Kim Murphy, were diagnosed with GBM, and both ultimately lost their battle with the dreaded disease.

"It has been very difficult," Russell said. "After losing my father and John to see it affecting someone like Meghan was very tough to see. We have lost so many people close to us to the disease. My family went through more than ten years of people being in and out of hospitals and losing so many people. For a while it felt like it would never end."

With his ride in the PMC, Russell is hoping to help spare other families the pain and suffering that his family has known. But in order to do that he needed to raise enough money for the ride, $4,000 to be exact. For a while he was not sure how he was going to do it. It was looking like he may come up a little short of his goal. But one night at Wamesit Lanes changed everything.

Russell recently held a Bowling Tournament as a fundraiser at the popular Tewksbury location, and the results could not have been any better, as he was able to raise enough money to meet his goal. Russell was truly grateful for all those who came out to support his fundraising efforts.

"That was my biggest fear, not being able to raise enough money. It was very rewarding to be able to reach my goal," Russell said. "It was amazing to see people I had not seen in a long time as well as people I had just met in the last couple of years come out for it. We had to get extra lanes because so many people came out."

Among those in attendance were Meghan McCarthy's mother Lee, as well as one of Meghan's former basketball teammates at Tewksbury High Danielle DePierro. Joe and his wife Suzanne were also very appreciative of Donnie McLaren Sr. and Donnie McLaren Jr., the owners of Wamesit Lanes, for all of their assistance that evening and leading up to the event.

"They were both very helpful," Suzanne said. "In all of the fundraisers I have done, Donnie has done more than anybody in his philanthropic efforts. I also want to say how proud I am of Deb and Carol for all of their perseverance through the years. They have been amazing."

And now it is Joe's turn to show just how amazing he can be on his bike, or actually on a bike he is borrowing from Scott Patterson, who rode in the PMC in 2011. Joe obviously has some nerves heading into the race, but he is mostly just excited to ride and do his part for cancer research.

"I am looking forward to it," Russell said. "I have cheered on a lot of riders over the years. I have been to Bourne and been to Providence as well. And now my family is looking forward to seeing me ride and so am I. The Flying Henry's are a great group of people and I am happy to be riding with them."

his experience in leading the department, Mr. Harrison also served as a coach for multiple varsity teams, as well as a classroom teacher for many years. Based upon his extensive experience and his familiarity with the district, I can't think of a better person to step into the role it and provide stability and consistency to help serve our district during this time of transition.

It will be my intention to launch a full search in the winter months as we seek to find a long-term replacement for Mr. Alberts. As that time approaches it will be my intention to share with you information about the search, and how members of the community can get involved in the process."

After the announcement became public, Harrison was reached by phone. He said that he is excited about coming back for the year with hopes of making it a smooth transition for the next person in line for the position.

"I would like to thank Superintendent Brand for the opportunity to return as the interim athletic director," said Harrison. "When I retired three years ago, I had no idea or intention of returning in this capacity. I look forward to the beginning of the fall season, which is upon us in a few short weeks.

"My goal is to hopefully ensure a smooth transition, not only for the district, but also for the Middlesex League. I hope my experience and knowledge of how things work, not only in the school system but for the Town of Wilmington, will help in moving forward. The parent meeting is Thursday, August 15th at 6 pm, see you there!"

Harrison attended WHS and played football and baseball and graduated in 1969. He then attended UMass-Amherst and graduated with a degree in Physical Education and a minor in Biology.

The following year he returned to WHS where he was an assistant football coach from 1974-1981, before taking over as the head coach from 1982-1993.

In addition, Harrison was also the head softball coach for two years, served as the Freshmen Baseball coach for 11 years and the JV Baseball coach for one season. He left WHS for the 12 years after 1993, and came back as a physical education teacher before being named the fourth AD following Larry Cushing, Jim Martin and Jim Gillis.

Harrison spent 30 total years of service in the WHS system between being a teacher, coach and 13 years as the AD.

During his tenure at WHS, Harrison oversaw over 50 athletic programs for a high school that has just under 1,000 students. He added three varsity sports, four subvarsity programs, and was instrumental in the athletic department leaving the Cape Ann League for the Middlesex League.

He also added a handful of tremendous coaches who at the time revitalized struggling programs, in particular Jodi MacKenzie with field hockey and Jay Keane with girls basketball.

Fifty years of friendship a ride to remember to keep in perspective the challenge he is facing in preparing for a long bike ride as opposed to the challenge that Ken and others like him are facing.

"I think about it like, here I am stressing about a long bike ride and raising the $5,000 that I need to raise, but in reality that is nothing," Stalker said. "Not just Ken, but any one of these people who have been diagnosed with cancer would love those challenges instead of what they are going through."

This is not Stalker's first time dealing with cancer in his family. His wife Paula was diagnosed with breast cancer several years back, so he knows what it was like to see someone close to him fight through the disease. Paula is now fully recovered and doing great, and while he hoping for a similar result for his friend, he knows it will be even more difficult in this case.

"With my wife, there was a clear path to a solution that we worked through," Stalker said. "It is a little different with Kenny because there is no real clear path. That is a very tough thing, and I haven't figured out how to deal with that yet. But it keeps me going and keeps me working to help in any way I can."

The other thing that keeps Stalker going is that he is not alone in his ride. With Jennifer and Sophie by his side, Stalker is confident he can meet any challenge before him. This is Jennifer's second year riding in the PMC, while Sophie, like Stalker will be riding for the first time.

"It has been great doing this with them," Stalker said. "I missed it last year, but I decided to do it this year and I am so glad I did. Jenn has been great and Sophie has just been incredible. She is a 13-year old kid, and she understands the implications of what is going on with her dad and she wanted to do something to help. I am so proud of her."

Stalker also couldn't be prouder of his friend Ken, who is doing his best to make sure cancer doesn't hold him back. Once a week Stalker makes his way out to Ken's home in South Hamilton to ride with Sophie. On one of those recent rides, Ken had a surprise for him.

"I went to the house to meet Sophie and out comes Ken in is biking gear," Stalker said. "It was just amazing. We went out for the ride, and just took our time and when we got done riding, he gave me a hug. It was just an incredible experience. I can tell you motivation will not be a problem for me."

Tewksbury's 8U All-Star Baseball team takes home Conway Tournament Title

By JOSH CAREDEO
Sports Correspondent

sports@yourtowncrier.com
TEWKSBURY - Tewksbury's 8U All Star Team completed the Conway Classic tournament over the weekend with a championship victory.

After going through pool play undefeated, it was on to the bracket portion of the tournament, starting with the semifinals.

Tewksbury defeated Swansea in the semifinals last Thursday in blowout fashion by a score of 16-6.

In the first inning, the team set the tone for the game with stellar defensive play. Catcher Jack Ryan throwing out a runner trying to steal second.

After another runner reached base, Oliver Greene turned an inning ending double-play by fielding the ball from shortstop, stepping on second to get the force out, and throwing to Lucas DiFranco at first. "Our players and fans all got very excited," said coach Evan Greene.

Both Logan Augustyniak and Greene went 3-for-3 in the game -- Logan really set the tone of the game with two hard hit double and three RBI's on the night.

Jason Khourie had a double and two RBIs, Patrick Quinlan had a single and two RBIs, Stephen McGillicuddy walked twice and scored both times, and Lucas DiFranco walked and singled and scored both times.

Logan Augustyniak pitched 3.1 strong innings to start the game. Oliver Greene and Ethan Chase came in relief.

The game ended in a mercy rule after Justin Plamondon knocked in Tyler Burris with his fourth RBI of the game.

Saturday's championship game against Dracut didn't start out as planned for the boys.

Dracut scored five runs in the top of the first to get out to a big lead early. Aggressive base running and throwing errors by Tewksbury made the deficit hard to overcome.

But, Coach Greene pulled the team together before their first at bats in the game. "We had to calm our nerves a bit, said Greene.

Tewksbury responded with three runs in the bottom of the first to cut the lead to 5-3. Jason Khourie started the comeback in the first inning by hitting a long hard hit double to get our first run on the board, and then Ethan Chase hit a single to score two more runs in the first inning.

The offense kept chipping away at the lead the rest of the game. In the fourth inning, Giacinto Graziano walked to force in the tying run. Four more runs were added over the course of the next two innings, giving the boys a 9-5 lead, and they never looked back.

Lucas DiFranco came in to pitch and sealed the deal for Tewksbury, as they defeated Dracut 9-7 to win the championship.

Both Justin Plamondon (3 RBI's on the game) and Logan Augustyniak (2 RBI's on the game) had two hits each. Augustyniak, along with Ethan Chase, Oliver Greene, and Lucas DiFranco all pitched in the game.

Coach Greene was really happy with how the kids improved each game, and a lot of those improvements were a result of working really hard at all practices.

"Everyone contributed in their own way," he said. "It was really impressive to see this young team bounce back after giving up five runs in the first inning of that championship game -- that comeback says a lot about their character."

The team members include

Logan Augustyniak, Ethan Chase, Tyler Dick, Lucas DiFranco, Giacinto Graziano, Oliver Greene, Jason Khourie, Luca Martinez, Stephen McGillicuddy, Justin Plamondon, Patrick Quinlan, and Jack Ryan.
